Pedigree charts

The pedigree charts use the Ahnentafel numbering system, a method used to organize and display a person's ancestors in a clear and systematic way that makes it easy to calculate relationships. Here are the basic principles:

- Root Person: The individual whose ancestry is being traced is assigned the number 1. In this case, the root person is Clarence Leigh Ferguson.
- Father and Mother: The father of the root person is assigned the number 2, and the mother is assigned the number 3.
- Grandparents: The paternal grandparents are numbered 4 and 5, with 4 being the father's father and 5 being the father's mother. The maternal grandparents are numbered 6 and 7, with 6 being the mother's father and 7 being the mother's mother.

Drop charts

A variation of the descendant chart, the drop chart displays the descendants of a particular individual or couple. It shows the lineage branching out from the ancestor down through multiple generations. The purpose of a descendant chart is to illustrate the family tree from the perspective of a specific ancestor, making it easier to visualize the family structure and relationships over time.

Reports

The family reports typically begin with the first ancestor for which all basic vital information is well established. This is often the immigrant to the United States.

The reports are written in NGSQ style, which gets its name from the National Genealogical Society Quarterly and is one of the most common systems used in genealogy. Features of this style include:

- Each person is assigned a number, beginning with #1 for the earliest ancestor.
- Generation numbers begin at #1 for the first immigrant to the United States. Non-immigrant generations begin with A and work backward. These appear both as headings and as small, italicized superscripts after a given name.
- If a child's number has a + before it, this indicates they are a direct ancestor and have a more extensive entry further down.
- Use of generation numbers helps keep lineage clear, especially in a long report. An individuals' generation number is shown in italics after their name, and their ancestors are listed in parentheses, each with their generation number.

1. Samuel¹ Galloway was born on 08 Oct 1682, in Dumfries and Galloway, Scotland. He died in 1723 in his hometown.

He married Elizabeth Graham in 1710. Elizabeth was born in 1695 in Dumfries and Galloway, Scotland. She died on 13 Nov 1755 in Cumberland, Pennsylvania.

Story

In 1723, about two years after their last child was born, Samuel Galloway died in his hometown at the age of 41. Shortly thereafter, Elizabeth and the boys emigrated across the Irish Sea settling in County Antrim, Ireland, which is known as the Galloway District. This was also during the persecutions of the Christians in Scotland and could have been the reason the family decided to leave.

Around 1740, the seven brothers arrived in America with their mother.

Our direct ancestor, George Galloway, first settled in Cumberland, Pennsylvania along with his brother, William, and their mother, Elizabeth.

It's believed the other brothers settled in South Carolina, Tennessee, and Indiana.

Generation 2: George Galloway

8. George² Galloway (Samuel¹) was born in 1721 in Dumfries and Galloway, Scotland. He died in 1785 in Jefferson, Kentucky.

He married Rebekah Junkin in 1741. Rebekah was born in 1720 in Antrim, Northern Ireland. She died in 1780 in Pennsylvania.

Around 1740, George Galloway arrived in America, and he first settled in Cumberland, Pennsylvania along with his brother, William, and their mother, Elizabeth.

In 1741, George married Rebekah Junkin. It's possible these two families traveled to America together since they married so soon after arriving. They first settled in the community of Great Cove, now part of Franklin County, which was recognized as belonging to Native Americans at that time. In 1742, settlers were warned against establishing homesteads after the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy lodged a formal complaint. But many ignored the warnings and remained in Great Cove.

On 22 May 1750, six Justices of Cumberland County went to the big Juanita and discovered five cabins occupied by squatters on Native American land that was also prime hunting ground. The cabins were burned, and the families were forced to move. One of these cabins was shared by George, his brother, William, and their mother, Elizabeth.

The Galloways continued to ignore the "frequent prohibitions on the part of the government" and once again settled on land belonging to the Native Americans. But this time the damage would be permanent. On 13 Nov 1755, in Armaugh Township, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, the Native Americans attacked and scalped their mother, Elizabeth, William's wife Martha, and their two children (as reported in The Pennsylvania Gazette).

Generation 3: James Galloway

- 14. James³ Galloway (Samuel¹, George²) was born on 01 May 1750 in Cumberland, Pennsylvania. He died on 06 Aug 1838 in Greene, Ohio.

He married Rebekah Junkin on 23 Nov 1778. Rebekah was born on 02 Oct 1759 in Cumberland, Pennsylvania. She died on 31 Aug 1812 in Greene, Ohio.

The story of James Galloway is presented as a timeline since this was the best method for me to organize the information we have.

Timeline	Description
1750	James Galloway was born on 01 May 1750, in Cumberland, Pennsylvania, to George Galloway and Rebekah Junkin.
1776 - 1779	James Galloway volunteered and served under Pennsylvania regiments during the American Revolutionary War, enlisting in 1776, 1777, and 1779 (all of which provided a pension after the war). He oversaw food provisions for the troops because of his expertise as a hunter.
1778	James married Rebekah Junkin, a distant cousin of his mother, on 23 Nov 1778.
1780	James and Rebekah move to Fayette, Kentucky.
1782	During the battle of Big Blue Lick on 19 Aug 1782 the family found refuge at a nearby fort. James, who was unarmed, was attacked by the famous outlaw Samuel Girty. Girty fired a shot which hit James. James grabbed the mane of his horse and rode back to the Fort about a mile away where he arrived unconscious. The bullet was lodged in the back of his neck for several years before being removed by a doctor. Although the wound was annoying it served as a weather forecast for neighbors as the amount of pain James suffered depended on the weather.

Timeline	Description
1798	After the Treaty of Greenville forced the native peoples from the lands in 1795, James Galloway moved his family to the area, being one of the first white settlers in what became Greene County.
1799	James Galloway built a log house near what is now Goes Station, a location not far from a Shawnee settlement. James Galloway became acquainted with Tecumseh, the chief, with a friendship developing between Tecumseh and the Galloway family. It is claimed that Rebekah, Galloway's daughter, taught Tecumseh how to read English (and legend goes on to say Tecumseh proposed marriage, but she refused). ¹
1803	Ohio became the 17th state on March 1, 1803, after being part of the Northwest Territory. James Galloway served as the first County Treasurer, a position he held until 1819.
1812	Rebekah Junkin Galloway, wife of James, died on 31 Aug 1812 in Greene, Ohio.
1817	James Galloway married Tamar Wilson on 13 Apr 1817.
1828	James Galloway served on the Board of Trustees for Miami University.
1838	James Galloway died on 06 Aug 1838, at the age of 88.
